CAREERS FAIRS IN ASIA, SUMMER 2014

Following the success of the Asia fairs in the last few years, the University of Oxford, the University of Cambridge, Imperial College London and the LSE will be running more recruitment fairs in Beijing, Hong Kong and Shanghai during the Summer 2014. These Careers Fairs are a unique way for organisations to meet potential candidates from each university, all of which have a significant number of students from China and Southeast Asia. These universities not only top the UK University rankings but also feature highly in global league tables and stand alongside universities such as Harvard and MIT.

By attending these fairs employers are directly targeting bilingual graduates at the top four universities in the UK. The events are an extremely efficient way of raising an organisation's profile among UK educated Chinese and South-East Asian graduates, and can fulfil recruitment needs without the expense of an overseas campaign.
